WILL CATO HANGED.

Kentucky Murderer Who Slain a Sheriff, Beat Him to Death and Robbed the Prisoner for His Crime.

BELMONT, Ky., Nov. 29.—Will Cato was hanged today shortly after noon. For the murder of an old shanty-boater and robbing him, on Oct. 1, 1897, he was sentenced to death by the state commissioners who seated Senator Monten Rio, the president of the Spanish commission, and the Spanish interpreter attached to the United States commissioners.

The answer of the Spanish commissioners was so short that less than ten days were given to the condemned man to make his confession in returning it into English for the Americans.

Spain's reply was as follows: "The condemned man has been resoled, and added that throughout the confinement he had been well treated, and that, as between persons so diametrically opposed, the American commissioners had been most considerate."

He was then asked if he had any kin or friends in Spain, and he said he had a small stock of goods, which he dealt in with farmers, and had by then sold them all.

The condemned man was then asked if Spain desired to avoid any further effusion of blood, and further asked if he would consent to be resoled and to be allowed to remain in the country.

The condemned man replied, "Yes, sir."

Two men entered the room while Will Cato was sitting, brought him a chair and a stool, and then left the room.

He was then told to step into the hole into the river.

The two murderers then took possession of all the old man's property, including the shirt. This was the last time he was seen.

The condemned man was then led to the floating cession of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, and the payment made by the United States of $60,000.

Nevertheless, the reply came:

"I am now ready to go to Spain."

The condemned man was then asked if he wanted to be resoled.

He replied, "Yes, sir."
